Do you, sir, plead that you were not present to hear the testimony in the police court when the case came on for trial? Where then was your legal rappresentative? Did he not report to you? If not, air, whose fault was it? If yours, why do you not confess it, and at least give those of us who trusted in you a right to believe that your exances as offered in your card published in the heights policy of last Tuesday were sincere? If your lieutenant neglected his plain duty, why, sir, do you in defiance of your oath, inflict upon the tax-payers an incompetent official?

It seems to me, sir, that as the week grows your conduct becomes more repre-

To me, sir, there seems to be but two courses left for you, and one of these the people inperatively demand that you should take. Either honestly confess your fault and begin anew, or at once resign from a position you are not worthy to sill. I know I but voice the apinion of five-sixths of the people of this city when I place these alternatives before you.

But you should not go alone. Mr. Healy who has proved himself equally unfat to represent his constituents should bear you company. No good can come to a city whose law makers are law breakers. It is not a wonder that the tax payers of Wheeling refuse to vote money to be expended under such officers.

I regret sir, the necessity that compels these plain words. To a man of your known sensitiveness they must appear harsh. But you yourself have courted the necessity that demands heroic treatment. I trust, sir, that you will see the justness of my position, and in deference to the naiversal wish, see down from the position you now occupy before a more painful course be resorted to. The regret that some of us woulf feel at your disappearance from official acappection with the city, is in no small degree molified by the knowledge that a Democratic Successor. Indeed, under the circumstances, it can scarcely be doubted that Republican members would vote for a Democrat, for all but the wilfully blind and hopelessly ignorant, know that this is in no sense a political fight. It is simply and solely, law vs. lawlessness.

their business dead. But for the fact that City Sergeant Smith allowed them enough rope to hang themselves they assert that they would to day be prosperous and happy. They are praying fervently, "Lord, save us from our friends."

If there was a gambling room in the city last evening where a game was in progress, it was so slyly conducted that no body could "get on to it." An exterior inspection tour showed not one of the well known rooms lighted up, and as for two Washington, D.O., March 20.—1A. Last February, he alleges, she gave birth to a boy baby. Brady came here this week with the intention of obtaining a divorce and securing possession of his little girl, who was taken from home by his wife when she left. In his petition he alleges that Mrs. Brady is not a fit person to have charge of the child.

The writ was given to Deputy Sheriff Blanchard to serve. Mrs. Brady is living with her mother and sister in the Sixth ward. Brady accompanied the offner, but the three women, armed with pokers and clubs, defied the minion of the law. Brady was sent for reinforcements, and returned

"When is this thing going to end?" one of them asked a reporter last night. "What thing? Porter Smith's adminisin the place than on the first night, there were not near so many standing. It was thought the first night that all were in the building that could be gotten there, and there was no place in which to allow Murphy and the other workers to move about. Last night there were probably 1,400 people present, and the aisles were about clear. Again attention is called to the fact that the doors of this church open in instead of out. This should be remedied at once, provided the crowds are to continue.

It seems to me, sir, that as the week grows your conduct becomes more reprehensible. More sad goes the insincerity of your published excuses tecome apparent, and we who have been your friends, grow sick at heart, as the evidence against you accumulates.

That Mr. Healy contributed to your election, time, meany and influence, we now know. But that you, a man under oath, in the pay of the city should for such a reason wantonly and knowingly neglect your duty is astounding. Did not other citizens, thily as honorable, fully as influential, contribute to your election? Are their wishes to be disrayaged to reward a known law-breaker, though helps

Notwithstanding the cold and disagreesable weather of least night, the building was crowded long before the hour for commencing the meeting, and fully two hundred were turned away. Under the able direction of Rev. Mr. Shott, the pastor of the church, the seating arrangements have been greatly improved since these meetings commenced, and last night, while

After the usual singing and reading of the Scriptures Mr. Murphy took the stand. Although suffering with headache he spoke for nearly an hour in his pleasing and interesting manner on temperance in a general way. He closed by referring to the time when the Nation called for aid and the enway. He closed by reterring to the time when the Nation called for aid and the enthusiasm that was created as the boys stepped to the front; was there not a cry at this time for aid? Yes; then let the men step to the front and join the vast army that is being raised to put down the vaster army of King Alcohol. The simile was a very clever one and was put in Mr. Murphy's most magnetic manner. To his invitation to sign the pledge there was a very gratifying response. He circulated in the audience while the choir led the singing of several hynns, in which the audience joined enthusiastically.

Mr. Murphy then proceeded to call on the ministers and others to make short aidresses, and a number were made. There were two or three victims of misplaged confidence among this number, the result of Mr. Murphy's habit referred to above.

To-day Mr. Murphy goes to Greensboro, Pa., to address a temperance meeting there. This will not interfere, however, with the holding of another temperance meeting at the Baptis church, nor will the meeting be without its Murphy, for Mr. Edward Murphy, the son, will be present and address the meeting. His lattler bespoke for him last night a warm welcome. The young man has all of his father's energy find fire and argument and aptiness, and knows how to conduct a rattling good meeting. Francis durphy while in Pittsburgh to-day, will make an effort to arrange for being in this city next Sunday, and in case he can be here, a monaiter meeting will be held. Arrangements will glap be made, projably, to have Mr. Murphy here serry night next week.
